Inspector General's Statement

The DD/P stress in staff meetings and on other appropriate occasions the necessity for having both area divisions and functional units and emphasize the importance of both to the successful conduct of operations, especially those of the more advanced and complex types.

DD/P Comment

Concur: Since early this year I have been studying the organizational structure of the CS and have given particular thought to the relationship of the staffs to the operating divisions. There is no question of the need for functional units as well as area divisions and for a clear delineation of their respective responsibilities. I have stressed my views concerning the complementing roles of the staffs and divisions at my staff meetings, at courses given by OTR and in memorandum form. Many of the changes I have recently placed into effect and others still under study are designed to clarify relationships, fix responsibilities and insure the proper discharge of the functions of both the staffs and the area divisions. It is my intention to align our components and their activities in a way that will realize the benefits of functional experts without excessive reviews and without dividing command authority for any given operation or function.
